Born in Venice in 1678, Antonio Vivaldi was an ordained priest, a virtuosic violinist, and an influential music teacher. The so-called prete rosso (Redheaded Priest) was also one of the most inventive and prolific composers of the Baroque era and wrote prodigiously in almost every genre. In addition to some 90 operas, dozens of sacred works, 4 oratorios, and about 40 secular cantatas, he generated reams of instrumental music, including at least 500 concertos for solo instruments and orchestral groupings. With this massive catalog of concertos, Vivaldi helped establish the structural conventions that continue, 300 years later, to define the form: a three-movement, fast-slow-fast structure, balanced between individual virtuosity and collective unity.

After giving up his pastoral duties late in 1706, at the age of 28, Vivaldi taught violin at a prestigious all-girls orphanage and music school in Venice, the Ospedale della Pietà, where he had been giving lessons for the past three years. Although he eventually retired from full-time teaching so that he could focus on opera commissions elsewhere, he kept supplying the Pietà with new material until about 1729. He spent several months in Mantua and Rome, shepherding his operas through to production, and overseeing still more opera premieres in Vienna and Prague in the early 1730s. After burning bridges in his native Venice and squandering a hefty fortune, he returned to Vienna in 1741. One month after arrival, he succumbed to a gastrointestinal illness and died on July 28, 1741, at age 63. He received a pauper’s burial.

This all-Vivaldi program skips around both chronologically and conceptually, interspersing instrumental and vocal pieces. The sacred and the secular, the dramatic and the devotional—all are vividly represented.
Vivaldi’s Concerto for Strings in C major, RV 114, comes from a set of concertos copied out by his violinist father in the 1720s. The precise date of composition is unknown, but believed to be sometime after 1717. Choppy and propulsive, the opening Allegro combines dotted, dancelike rhythms with inventive counterpoint. Appended to the central movement, a dusky Adagio, is the closing Ciaccona—Vivaldi’s take on a French form. French operas of Vivaldi’s era generally ended with a chaconne, a series of variations over a descending repeated bass figure. Vivaldi’s Ciaccona respects this convention, dipping into C minor and blurring the line between coquettish and creepy. Listen for the ground bass, which anchors this triple-meter dance, and let it remind you of the walking bass lines in blues, rock, and soul music, still centuries away from being born.

“Gelosia, tu già rendi l’alma mia” and “L’ombre, l’aure, e ancora il rio” from Ottone in villa

These selections come from Ottone in villa, which received its premiere in 1713. Although this was Vivaldi’s first major opera, the 35-year-old composer had years of experience composing sacred and secular music and revising other composers’ operas for a fee. Set in ancient Rome, Ottone turns a convoluted plot about mismatched lovers into a transcendent musical occasion. Four of the five main roles are performed by women, but only two of them are actually supposed to be female characters, and one plays a woman who is disguised as a man. “Gelosia, tu già rendi l’alma mia” is sung by Caio at the end of the first act. Alternating vengeful coloratura with slower, more introspective passages, Caio rails against his faithless lover. In yet another gender-bending complication, Caio is meant to be male; the role, originally intended for a castrato, usually falls to a female soprano nowadays.
The haunting “L’ombre, l’aure, e ancora il rio” comes at the end of Act II. Here, Caio grieves while the offstage Tullia (disguised as a male page so she can spy on her former lover) echoes and mocks him. Also offstage, a pair of flutes and two “echo” violins enhance the sense of displacement and isolation.

“Nel profondo cieco mondo” from Orlando furioso

Based on an epic poem by Ariosto, which had already inspired Vivaldi to compose a similar opera in 1714, Orlando furioso was completed in 1727. Its titular hero is a knight who is driven insane by his unrequited passion for a princess. In “Nel profondo cieco mondo,” Orlando’s technically perilous opening aria, he sings of hope while facing down fears for the future: “Into the deep, dark world, let the fate once merciless to my heart tumble down./ The stronger love will triumph with the help of courage.” Like many roles in Vivaldi operas, the aria can be sung by a countertenor, as it is here, or by a mezzo-soprano or contralto.

First Performance November 1727, Venice
Scoring countertenor, harpsichord, and strings
Performance Time approximately 4 minutes

“Mentre dormi, amor fomenti” from L’Olimpiade

“Mentre dormi, amor fomenti” comes from L’Olimpiade, Vivaldi’s 1734 setting of an Olympics-themed libretto by Pietro Metastasio. In this Act I aria, Licida, the prince of Crete—in love with one woman but promised to another—sings a deceptively simple lullaby. “Mentre dormi” represents the Baroque aria at its most luminous and affecting: “While you sleep, may love grow in you.../ May the stream flow more gently; may even the slightest breeze stop blowing.”

First Performance February 17, 1734, Venice
Scoring countertenor, corno da caccia (horn), harpsichord, and strings
Performance Time approximately 6 minutes
“In braccio de’ contenti” from Gloria ed Imeneo

“In braccio de’ contenti” comes from Gloria ed Imeneo, one of three serenades that Vivaldi composed in the 1720s for assorted French aristocrats. Gloria ed Imeneo isn’t the original title, which is unknown because the first few pages of the manuscript, including the opening sinfonia, are missing. The work was commissioned to celebrate the wedding of Louis XV to the Polish princess Maria Leszczynska. In the spirit of such serenades, it was first performed outdoors, at the French Embassy in Venice, on the evening of September 12, 1725. The excerpted duet, which closes the hour-long serenade, spreads the final layer of ganache on the wedding cake: Imeneo (or Hymen, the god of marriage) and La Gloria (the personification of kingly glory) keep one-upping each other in fulsome praise for the royal couple.

Concerto for Two Horns and Strings in F major, RV 538

Baroque horn concertos often called for a range that could not easily be played by a single hornist on the natural horns of the era, which lacked the valves that allow modern horns to play more notes. To address this problem, Vivaldi and his contemporaries composed for two or more horns. Both of Vivaldi’s two surviving double-horn concertos are in the key of F major. The opening Allegro juggles hunting calls and virtuosic fanfares. The central Largo, in D minor, lets the cello sing an aching aria while the horns sit out the slow movement. (This was a common practice, since natural horns weren’t suited to the minor key.) The two horns return for the closing Allegro non molto.

Concerto grosso in D minor, RV 565

The Concerto grosso in D minor, RV 565, is the eleventh of a dozen concertos for stringed instruments compiled in Vivaldi’s L’estro armonico (The Harmonic Inspiration), first published in Amsterdam in 1711. Cast in four compact movements, RV 565 is scored for a standard trio sonata complement of two violins and a cello, supplemented by a string orchestra and, holding down the figured bass line, an organ. It begins with the two violins playing in unison over a jagged cello backdrop. The violins settle into a melody, which the cello takes up, and soon everything erupts into a full-fledged, four-part fugue. Pastoral and melancholy, the Largo initiates a gently rocking siciliano rhythm (in 12/8 meter). Vivaldi further specified that the Adagio and Largo should be performed spiccato, a technique that involves bouncing the bow off the strings. In the finale, the cello keeps veering off the continuo’s path, bent on its own virtuosic adventures. Shortly after Vivaldi published this concerto, J.S. Bach transcribed it for pipe organ.

Gloria in D major, RV 589

Gloria in D major, RV 589, Vivaldi’s most significant sacred work, was probably composed sometime after 1713 and before 1717, when Vivaldi retired from full-time teaching at the Ospedale della Pietà. The score was clearly intended for performance by the orphanage’s gifted chorus. At this stage of his career, Vivaldi was transitioning from full-time violin master to a composer of both sacred and secular music.

In the Roman Catholic tradition, the Gloria text is a hymn of praise used as the second part of the Ordinary of the Latin Mass, after the Kyrie. It begins with the words of the angels, as recounted in the Gospel of Luke: “Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace to men of good will.” The score disappeared after Vivaldi’s death and was rediscovered in the late 1920s, along with another Gloria in D major that’s less famous but almost as good. (He wrote at least three settings of the text, but only two survive.) Since the first modern performance of RV 589, in 1939, this iteration of the Gloria hymn has resonated with audiences in ways that Vivaldi never imagined. At least 100 recordings of it exist, and it has graced several film soundtracks, including the Academy Award–winning Shine, about the concert pianist David Helfgott.

Because there were no male choristers at the Pio Ospedale della Pietà, Vivaldi originally scored all the parts for female singers. He supplemented the typical Baroque orchestra of strings and basso continuo (often an organ) with oboe and trumpet. The piece is in twelve sections, each distinguished by a different musical setting. Eight of the numbers are composed for the entire chorus; the remaining four feature soloists, singing either alone or with other performers.

Section by Section

The opening number, “Gloria in excelsis Deo,” establishes the triumphant key of D major with exuberant leaping octaves and momentum-building repetitions. Behind all the bombast, a crackling energy propels the music forward, buffeted by bursts of winds and bright choral flourishes. In contrast, “Et in terra pax hominibus” is smudged with chromatic shadows. Then “Laudamus te,” featuring two sopranos and an instrumental refrain, doles out more lyrical exaltation. After two choral numbers, the solemn “Gratias agimus tibi” and the contra-puntal “Propter magnam gloriam,” the only solo soprano aria unfolds: “Domine Deus, Rex coelestis.” For this slow and rapturous ode to the almighty, the soprano is joined by a solo oboe. The rhythmically tricky seventh number, “Domine Fili unigenite,” goes to the chorus. It’s followed by the sumptuous minor-key Adagio “Domine Deus, Agnus Dei,” for countertenor (originally contralto) and chorus, the only setting in the cycle where the chorus joins the solo singer, in responsorial style.

After another choral interlude, the fleet and urgent “Qui tollis peccata mundi,” the countertenor sings his only true solo, the church aria “Qui sedes ad dexteram Patris.” This piece resurrects material from the first movement and helps prepare listeners for the climactic conclusion. The whole chorus returns for the final two numbers, “Quoniam tu solus sanctus,” a simplified version of the “Gloria in Excelsis,” and “Cum Sancto Spiritu,” which culminates in a majestic double-fugue.

NICHOLAS MCGEGAN
Daniel, Mary, and Francis O’Keefe Guest Conductor. This season marks Nicholas McGegan’s 32nd year as music director of Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra and Chorale and he is also principal guest conductor of the Pasadena Symphony. Best known as a Baroque and Classical specialist, McGegan’s approach—intelligent, infused with joy, and never dogmatic—has led to appearances with many of the world’s major orchestras. At home in opera houses, McGegan shone new light on close to twenty Handel operas as the artistic director and conductor at the Göttingen Handel Festival and the Mozart canon as principal guest conductor at Scottish Opera in the 1990s. At the same time, he was principal conductor of the Drottningholm Opera in Sweden.

SHEREZADE PANTHAKI
An acknowledged star in the early-music field, Sherezade Panthaki has ongoing collaborations with leading early music interpreters including Nicholas McGegan, Simon Carrington, the late John Scott, Matthew Halls, and Masaaki Suzuki, with whom she made her New York Philharmonic debut. Panthaki’s 2017–18 season features performances of Vivaldi’s Gloria with the Los Angeles Philharmonic at the Hollywood Bowl, the Milwaukee Symphony, Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra, Music of the Baroque, her return to Ars Lyrica, Pasadena Symphony Orchestra, Orlando Philharmonic, and a U.S. Christmas Oratorio tour with Bach Collegium Japan.

LEANN SCHUERING
Coloratura soprano Leann Schuering’s stage credits include Zerbinetta in Ariadne auf Naxos, Zerlina in Don Giovanni, the Queen of the Night in Die Zauberflöte, and Susanna in Le nozze di Figaro. She has performed with the Toledo Symphony Orchestra, the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra, Adrian Symphony Orchestra, and others. Her concert repertoire includes Brahms’ Ein deutsches Requiem, Mozart’s Requiem, and multiple works by Handel, including Messiah and Solomon. She is a two-time district winner of the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions and a third prize recipient at the regional level.
Jay Carter

Countertenor Jay Carter has gained recognition as one of America’s finest. A frequent collaborator with period and modern ensembles, Carter is recognized as a leading interpreter of late Baroque repertoire. Recent appearances include Bach’s St. Matthew Passion with the American Bach Soloists and the Choir of St. Thomas Church, Handel’s Messiah with the National Symphony and Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra, Handel’s Saul with Musica Vocale and the Kansas City Baroque Consortium, Handel’s Jeptha with Ars Lyrica, and the North American Premiere of John Tavener’s Lament for Jerusalem with the Choral Arts Society of Washington.

Thomas Jöstlein

Ruth and Ed Trusheim Guest Artist

Thomas Jöstlein, associate principal horn with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra since 2010, enjoys an active and varied musical life. From 2007–09, Jöstlein was the New York Philharmonic’s assistant principal horn, playing all positions, including associate principal and third horn. Previously, he held positions with the Honolulu, Omaha, Richmond, and Kansas City symphony orchestras, and performed in summer festivals in Oregon, Ohio, Colorado, and North Carolina. An active soloist, Jöstlein won first prize in the professional division of the American Horn Competition and the grand prize at the Hugo Kauder Music Competition at Yale University, earning a recital at Merkin Concert Hall in New York City.

Christopher Dwyer

Lucy and Stanley Lopata Guest Artist

Christopher Dwyer is the second horn player for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, the Sun Valley Summer Symphony, and the Colorado Music Festival Orchestra. He was previously a member of the Jacksonville and New Mexico Symphony Orchestras. He has participated in Deutsche Grammophon studio recording projects with both the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Pierre Boulez and with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Yannick Nezét-Séguin. Additionally, he has frequently performed as a guest with the Cleveland Orchestra, Los Angeles Philharmonic, Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, Kansas City Symphony, IRIS Orchestra, and the Malaysian Philharmonic.
ERIN SCHREIBER
Violinist Erin Schreiber joined the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra as Assistant Concertmaster in 2008, at the age of 20. She has appeared in recital throughout the United States, as well as in London, Sweden, Italy, and Germany. Schreiber has collaborated with artists including baritone Thomas Hampson and pianist John Novacek, and has toured with jazz legend Chris Botti. She made her SLSO solo debut with Berio’s Corale (on Sequenza VIII) in 2011 and played Vaughan Williams’s The Lark Ascending for the opening weekend of 2014.

MELODY LEE
This is Vancouver-born violinist Melody Lee’s fifth year playing with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. She has appeared as soloist with the Colburn Orchestra, the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra, and the Vancouver Youth Symphony Orchestra, and has been concertmaster of the Colburn Orchestra as well as associate concertmaster at the Young Musicians Foundation Debut Orchestra in Los Angeles. Last season she performed Joan Tower’s Second String Force for solo violin in the SLSO’s Equal Play concert series, which highlights female composers.

BJORN RANHEIM
Cellist Bjorn Ranheim was appointed to the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra in 2005 and is a member of the Sun Valley Summer Symphony in Idaho. He served as principal cellist with the Colorado Music Festival from 2006–2015 and has performed and toured with the orchestras of Atlanta, Baltimore, Cleveland, and Detroit. Ranheim has appeared as soloist on multiple occasions with the SLSO and Colorado Music Festival, and in the spring of 2011, appeared on A Prairie Home Companion with Garrison Keillor, performing alongside jazz vocalist Erin Bode. Ranheim is also a founding member of the 442s, an acoustic string ensemble that pursues innovative, genre-defying music making and collaborations.
AMY KAISER
AT&T Foundation Chair
Director of the St. Louis Symphony Chorus since 1995, Amy Kaiser has prepared the chorus for performances with music directors David Robertson, Hans Vonk, and Leonard Slatkin. She has also conducted performances with the chorus and the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at Powell Hall and the St. Louis Cathedral Basilica in repertoire including Handel’s Messiah and works by Vivaldi, Haydn, Mozart, and Schubert. Guest conductor with Chicago’s Grant Park Festival and the Berkshire Choral Festival, Kaiser conducted over fifty performances with the Metropolitan Opera Guild and worked with many regional orchestras. Formerly Music Director of the Dessoff Choirs and conductor at New York’s 92nd Street Y, Kaiser was Director of Choral Music at the Mannes College of Music and taught conducting at Manhattan School of Music.

Vivaldi: Voice of the Baroque
by H.C. Robbins Landon
University of Chicago Press, 1993
Many details from Vivaldi’s life remain cloaked in mystery, but H.C. Robbins Landon presents a surprisingly comprehensive portrait of the composer. Enriched with illustrations of 18th-century Venice, Landon’s concise, accessible, and insightful biography draws on newly translated letters and other documentation.

Vivaldi (Master Musicians Series)
by Michael Talbot
Oxford University Press, 2000
This succinct and engaging biography discusses the sociocultural and historical aspects of Vivaldi’s musical life while providing a thorough (but not hypertechnical) analysis of the work itself. Baroque music authority Michael Talbot admires his subject but doesn’t overlook his personal failings. This is a fine place to start learning more about the rise and fall of the Red Priest of Venice.

The Vivaldi Compendium
by Michael Talbot
Boydell, 2011
This helpful volume is one part research tool, one part capsule biography, one part dictionary—and likely to satisfy any questions you might have about Vivaldi’s life and his enormous body of work. Editor Michael Talbot is a prominent scholar of Baroque music, as well as Emeritus Professor of Music at the University of Liverpool. Although most of the 750 entries are quite concise and the book is on the slender side, the excellent bibliography offers a wealth of credible sources for further investigation.

THE LEGACY OF ROSEMARIE KIRCHHOEFER

Donor Spotlight

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra’s concert on Friday, December 1, is dedicated in loving memory of Rosemarie Kirchhoefer. Her lifelong love of music and the orchestra is recalled by her nephews, Joseph G. Gleich and James G. Gleich.

From an early age, Rosemarie expressed an interest in music and voice, which was cultivated by her parents. She attended the Notre Dame School of Music, where she regularly landed significant singing roles in the school plays. After graduating, she went on to Saint Louis University where she received certification in management. While her formal education resulted in securing a supervisor’s position with Southwestern Bell Co., Rosemarie continued to cultivate her passion for music by singing with church choirs and soloing for weddings and special events for more than three decades.

Eventually, Rosemarie gave up her career for married life with Albert (“Al”), but she considered herself fortunate to share a rich and full life with a man who shared her passion for music, dance, the arts and travel. Their broad interests resulted in active roles at many of St. Louis’ most recognizable civic organizations, with the SLSO at the forefront. Rosemarie and Al also joined and then later formed Square and Round Dancing clubs. During the week, they danced, and on the weekends, they sang or attended the symphony.

After Al’s early passing from Alzheimer’s, the SLSO took on added significance for Rosemarie. She often attended special choral concerts and holiday events, bringing her friends or godchildren along. In her retirement years Rosemarie spent almost two decades singing and entertaining seniors in retirement communities.

She and Al were able to leave large bequests to several local civic organizations. A symphony supporter for more than forty years, Rosemarie was convinced that the SLSO was an organization capable of informing, delighting, and educating more than just the present generation. A kind and determined woman with a strong work ethic and the desire to give back to her community, Rosemarie’s generosity is now helping to change the future for the SLSO.

An Evening with Leslie Odom, Jr.

Program will be announced from the stage.

There will be one intermission.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT
This concert is supported by Washington University in St. Louis McDonnell International Scholars Academy.
LESLIE ODOM, JR.
Multifaceted performer Leslie Odom, Jr. completed his run on Broadway starring as Aaron Burr in the original cast of the blockbuster hit musical, Hamilton, a role that earned him the 2016 Tony Award for lead actor in a musical. He is also a Grammy Award-winner as a principal soloist on Hamilton: Original Broadway Cast Recording, which won the 2016 award for best musical theater album.

Odom, Jr. made his Broadway debut at the age of 17 in Rent before heading to Carnegie Mellon University’s prestigious School of Drama, where he graduated with honors. He is the recipient of a 2002 Princess Grace Award for Acting, which is dedicated to identifying emerging talent in theater, dance, and film.

On the small screen, Odom, Jr. is best known for his portrayal of Sam Strickland in the NBC musical series Smash and his recurring role as Reverend Curtis Scott on Law & Order: SVU. He has also appeared in episodes of Gotham, Person of Interest, Grey’s Anatomy, House of Lies, Vanished, and CSI: Miami. On the big screen, he starred in the 2012 film Red Tails, opposite Terrence Howard, Cuba Gooding Jr., and David Oyelowo.

Odom’s debut solo album, Leslie Odom, Jr., was released in June 2016 on S-Curve Records and quickly rose to number one on the Billboard and iTunes jazz charts.

Look for him in Kenneth Branagh’s reimaging of Agatha Christie’s Murder on the Orient Express, now in theaters, featuring an all-star cast including Johnny Depp, Penelope Cruz, and Dame Judi Dench. Odom, Jr. was raised in Philadelphia, and currently resides in New York.

LEE MUSIKER
Grammy and Emmy Award-winning conductor, pianist, arranger, orchestrator, and composer Lee Musiker has established a distinguished and multifaceted career as both soloist and collaborator with the premier artists in the classical, operatic, Broadway, jazz, and pop music genres. He has conducted the New York Philharmonic; the Baltimore, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, Detroit, Honolulu, Houston, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, and National symphony orchestras; and was music director and principal conductor of the Palm Beach Pops for the 2014–15 season. Other conducting credits include the Jazz at Lincoln Center, Count Basie, Duke Ellington, and Henry Mancini Institute orchestras, and music director and conductor for the Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon.
